The International Pediatric Association (IPA) is dedicated to the principle of a meaningful and healthy life for every child. The IPA believes every child should be accorded the right to the highest attainable standard of health, and the opportunity to grow, develop, and fulfill to his or her human potential. The Technical advisory Groups (TAGs) are critical action and education components of the IPA. Guidelines to Technical Advisory Groups (TAG’s) help to provide the proper frame of work, to pursue their objectives, to interact with other TAG groups within the organization and to inform and follow directives of the Executive committee.

The TAG’s were established to enable leaders worldwide who are interested in the specific areas of interest (the "Tag’s Area of Expertise") to meet for the purpose of discussing and developing ideas, programs and projects which will improve the care of every child.
